

May 6, 1994

The University of New Mexico

Campus News

Larry Gordon, School of Public Administration visiting professor, received the Lester Breslow Award for Distinguished Achievement in Public Health. Gordon received the award in Los Angeles last month from the Los Angeles Department of Health Services. He was the featured speaker and discussed "Public Health: A Blurred Vision." Gordon also received the Alumni Association's Zimmerman Award "for significant contributions that have brought fame and honor to the University" or New Mexico.